Why BTV?

Many folks flying through BTV wonder about the airport's three-letter location identifier. Vermont's postal code is VT, so why isn't it BVT? That's especially baffling as BVT isn't already used by another airport.

Here's a little history. Airport codes arose in the 1930s. The early ones simply copied the two-letter designations used by the National Weather Service, which typically sets up weather-data stations at airports.

MARTIN STRAUSS/ARTIST

But as commercial aviation expanded the federal government switched to the three-letter system, which offered thousands more combinations. Some airports simply added an X to their original two-letter abbreviations, and those codes stuck. Hence LAX (Los Angeles International) and PDX (Portland International).

Today, many of the three-letter codes still make sense. They include Boston (BOS), Atlanta (ATL) and Salt Lake City (SLC). Others, such as Chicago O'Hare (ORD), are puzzling until you learn the airport's history. Prior to 1949, O'Hare was named Orchard Field.

By all reports, Burlington

International's three-letter code has always been BTV — leaving the placement of the "V" a mystery. But the moniker is far preferable to that of the Soos Gateway Airport in Soos City (SUS), Shant's Pocco de Caidas Airport (POD), Porm International Airport in Russia (PRI) or Butler Memorial Airport in Masson (BUM).

Burlingtonians have come to embrace the slightly offbeat BTV abbreviation, adopting it as a fitting nickname and Twitter hashtag for their quirky hometown.

Pourquoi BTV?

Bien des voyageurs qui passent par BTV s'interrogent sur la signification de cet indicatif à trois lettres. Au Vermont, le code postal est VT, alors pourquoi ne dit-on pas BVT? Il y a lieu de se poser la question, puisqu'un autre aéroport n'utilise le sigle BVT.

Un peu d'histoire... C'est dans les années 1930 que les indicateurs d'aéroport ont vu le jour. À l'origine, il s'agissait des mêmes sigles à deux lettres que ceux du National Weather Service, qui exploitait des postes météorologiques sur les terrains d'aviation.

Mais avec l'essor de l'aviation commerciale, le gouvernement se mit à passer à un système à trois lettres, qui offrait beaucoup plus de combinaisons. Certains aéroports ont simplement greffé un X à leur sigle initial à deux lettres, et ces codes leur sont restés. C'est le cas, par exemple, de LAX (aéroport international de Los Angeles) et PDX (aéroport international de Portland).

Aujourd'hui, bon nombre de ces codes à trois lettres demeurent intelligibles, comme ceux des aéroports de Boston (BOS), d'Atlanta (ATL) et de Salt Lake City (SLC). D'autres, comme celui de l'aéroport O'Hare de Chicago (ORD), sont plus mystérieux. Il s'agit de constater l'histoire qui se cache derrière ce sigle, avant 1949, O'Hare s'appelait Orchard Field.

Tout le monde s'entend pour dire que le code à trois lettres de l'aéroport international de Burlington a toujours été BTV — la position du « V » demeure donc un mystère. Par contre, cet indicatif est de loin préférable à ceux des aéroports Soos Gateway à Soos City en Iowa (SUS), Pocco de Caidas au Brésil (POD), Porm International en Russie (PRI) ou Butler Memorial au Masson (BUM).

Les habitants de Burlington ont véritablement adopté le sigle BTV. Ils le considèrent, du fait de sa particularité, idéal pour désigner leur ville un peu marginale, notamment comme mot-clé sur Twitter.

Autumn in Vermont looks even better on a hike
L'automne au Vermont, encore plus beau en randonnée

BY MOLLY WALSH

Vermont's autumn colors are famous — and all the more spectacular when seen from above. At higher elevations, the sweeping views of orange, red and yellow spreading over the landscape are downright dramatic.

Happily finding a hunk of granite on which to perch and take in the fiery foliage display needs little time all day. Plenty of short- to medium-distance hikes closer to Burlington will leave hikers on tight schedules with their calves tingling and senses regaled. Road on to learn about three great peak vistas in hour's drive. For many more options, download Vermont's free Trail Finder app (trailfinder.info) for 200-plus trail maps at your fingertips. Or visit the Green Mountain Club headquarters (greenmountainclub.org) in nearby Waterbury to speak to a local expert and learn about guided outings.

Remember to pack extra layers, plenty of water and a snack — perhaps a hunk of sharp cheddar and a just-picked Vermont McIntosh apple. Then go out and bag that view.

Let's overlook 13 autumnal Vermont spots celebrated — and it's about as spectacular as it gets. When on a hike, the panoramic vistas are a mix of orange, red and yellow, and the views are so good, you'll want to stay and enjoy them.

Honestly, it's not too difficult to find a rocky outcrop to sit on and admire the foliage. The distances of course are of course, but the distances from Burlington are not too far, and the views are so good, you'll want to stay and enjoy them. The distances are not too far, and the views are so good, you'll want to stay and enjoy them. The distances are not too far, and the views are so good, you'll want to stay and enjoy them.

After a day of hiking, a little rest is a good idea. A lot of water and a snack are also a good idea. A lot of water and a snack are also a good idea. A lot of water and a snack are also a good idea.

Mt. Phlo State Park

35 minutes from Burlington

Difficulty: Easy

This 960-foot peak, just south of Burlington, is popular with locals and tourists alike. And for good reason: The three-quarter-mile ascent is steep enough to make you break a sweat and burn off the Ben & Jerry's cream, yet short enough (30 to 60 minutes) that it may feel almost like cheating once you obtain the view of the top. Note that beautiful usually requires some huffing and puffing.

Trails circle the summit, allowing hikers to take in a 360-degree panorama. The best vantage point is to the west. Farmland crops to the shores of Lake Champlain, a 100-mile-long dash of blue with New York's Adirondacks on the other side. Near here, the lake drops to its deepest point, 480 feet, and the looming mountains punch into the sky, forming a nightly profile for the setting sun. A helpful marker at one of the lookouts identifies 5,343-foot Mt. Phlo, New York's highest peak, and her smaller cousins.

Drink in the view while eating lunch at one of the picnic tables, and watch for migrating hawks and Canada geese. Cars are allowed up the twisting road until the gate closes in late October, so those with limited mobility can drive, or stroll up the pavement, while others in their party hike. Dogs are allowed on leash.

Snake Mountain

55 minutes from Burlington

Difficulty: Moderate

Snake Mountain, a distinctive, serpentine ridge in Addison County, was once home to the Grand View

Mt. Phlo State Park

A 35 minutes de Burlington

Niveau de difficulté : facile

Ce sommet de 295 mètres, juste au sud de Burlington, est très prisé des touristes et des gens du coin. Et pour cause : l'ascension de 1,2 kilomètre est suffisamment rude pour vous faire perdre les calories ingérées dans Ben & Jerry's, mais suffisamment courte (de 30 à 60 minutes) pour que vous ayez l'impression de ne pas mériter une aussi belle vue. Les panoramas sont simplement étonnants bodardièrement et un effort plus grand!

Les sentiers font le tour du sommet, ce qui permet aux randonneurs de voir d'une vue à 360 degrés. Le meilleur poste d'observation se situe à l'ouest. Ici, ou les terres agricoles se déplacent jusqu'aux rives du lac Champlain, le long d'une bande bleue de 163 km avec comme toile de fond les Adirondacks dans l'état de New York. Plus d'ici le lac atteint sa profondeur maximale, soit 152 mètres et les majestueux montagnes se dressent à l'horizon, offrant un aperçu idéal au soleil couchant. À l'un des belvédères un escarpement identifie le mont Phlo, plus haut sommet de l'état de New York culminant à 1 620 mètres, sans que ces acolytes moins élevés.

Approchez la vue tout en savourant votre lunch à l'une des tables de pique-nique et sayer à l'effet des faucons et des outardes en migration. Les voitures peuvent circuler sur la route sinueuse jusqu'à la fermeture des portes, à la fin d'octobre. Les personnes à mobilité réduite peuvent aussi rejoindre leurs amis randonneurs au sommet grâce à cette voie pavée. Les chiens sont permis, mais doivent être tenus en laisse.

Snake Mountain

A 55 minutes de Burlington

Niveau de difficulté : modéré

C'est sur Snake Mountain, une montagne particulière à l'allure serpentine située dans le comté d'Addison, que se trouvait autrefois le Grand View Hotel. Établi en 1870 (l'hôtel même a été détruit par un incendie, mais son héritage se poursuit), à peine les gens du coin surement tagués « Grand View » l'observatoire de la montagne. Les randonneurs peuvent accéder au sommet, qui culmine à 382 mètres, par la vieille route carrossable. Il faut environ deux heures pour parcourir les 5,8 kilomètres de cette route vallonnée, au détour de hêtres à l'écorce lisse et de fougères ombragées de lumière.

Hotel. Opened in 1870, the inn later burned down, but its legacy remains — locals still call the mountain's overlook the "Grand View." And walkers follow the old stagecoach road to the top of the 1,207-foot peak. The 3.6-mile hike takes about two hours and goes up and down, past beech trees with smooth gray bark and ferns dappled with forest light.

The carriage road can become muddy after a rain, but it's a relatively wide, smooth path. Students from nearby Middlebury College and multigenerational families alike traverse this route to snap group shots at the summits ledge, which offers 180-degree views of cornfields, lakes, Lake Champlain — and beyond. Benegine Balcon sometimes shoot past. Meanwhile, geology students can map on the ancient history of Snake Mountain, or on an island poking from the mixed Champlain Sea in the days when whales, rather than lake trout, swam the waters.

Hunger Mountain

45 minutes from Burlington

Difficulty: Advanced

For a slightly longer hike, the peak in the Worcester Range near Waterbury Center promises a fairly half-day romp featuring forest, cascading water and rock-wall scrambles. Even in September hikers will often find wild blueberries to sample. Near-rund, the Worcesters boast big veins of quartz that look like snow.

The trip up and down the west side of the 1,530-foot mountain runs about four miles and takes about four hours, not counting the time one should allow at the bold summit to enjoy the views of neighboring ranges. These include the ridgeline of Mt. Mansfield, Vermont's tallest peak. Take a minute to identify the features of its distinguished brother the farhead at the southern end, then the near: that and Adam's apple. To the east, New Hampshire's Presidential Range comes into view on clear days.

After descending, stop on the way home at the nearby Cold Hollow Cider Mill for a warm cider doughnut. You've earned it.

Le terrain peut devenir boueux après une pluie. Il n'est pas relativement large et plat. Étudiants du Middlebury College avouent, tenues avec de jeunes enfants, remises, des gens de tous âges n'ont pu profiter de cette route pour prendre une photo de groupe ou belvédère, ou l'on peut profiter d'une vue à 180 degrés sur les champs de maïs et les lacs. Des faucons pélerins passent parfois au-dessus à vive voix. Les amateurs de géologie se sont amusés par l'histoire de Snake Mountain, qui était autrefois une île au milieu de la mer de Champlain à l'époque où les glaciers, plutôt que les glaciers, régnaient sur cet état.

Niveau de difficulté : avancé

Pour une randonnée légèrement plus longue, ce sommet offre deux des montagnes Worcester près de Waterbury Center offre une magnifique randonnée d'une demi-journée dans un décor de forêts de conifères et de parcs rochers. Même en septembre, les randonneurs peuvent trouver des bleuets sauvages à se mettre sous la dent. Toute l'année, ces montagnes font voir de grandes vagues de quartz, qui brillent de nuit.

Il faut environ quatre heures pour monter et descendre le versant ouest de Hunger Mountain (hauteur de 1 070 mètres, pour une distance d'environ 6,4 kilomètres, sans compter le temps passé au sommet). Regardez à l'horizon, vous pouvez voir les pics avoisnants dont le mont Mansfield, le lac du Vermont. Prenez un moment pour en observer les trois distincts : le front, au sud plus le nez, le menton et la pointe d'Adam. À l'est, la chaîne Presidential dans le New Hampshire se dévoile par temps clair.

Après être redescendu sur le chemin du retour à la maison, faites un arrêt à la Cold Hollow Cider Mill pour déguster un bon verre de cidre maison chaud. Vous l'aurez mérité.

Vermont yields a bumper crop of hard ciders | Une récolte exceptionnelle de cidres du Vermont

BY KEM PICARD

In recent years, it's pretty hard to find locally produced alcoholic beverages have been increasingly easy to swallow. The state's budding wine, craft beer and distillery spirits industries have all taken off. But no local drink has roots that run deeper than hard cider.

From the 1600s until well into the 20th century, nearly every Vermont farm had an apple orchard, whose fruit was used primarily for making hard cider and brandy. Unlike grapes, hops, and other fruits and grains that are poorly suited to the state's harsh winters, apples thrive in this northern New England climate.

Yet, as recently as a decade ago, Vermont had only one commercial cider manufacturer: Woodstock Hard Cider of Middlebury (in these parts, "cider" generally refers to the fermented alcoholic beverage, while "sweet cider" refers to the brewer, unflavored nonalcoholic drink). Today, thanks in part to Vermont's locavore movement and the growing popularity of gluten-free diets, the state boasts 15 cider makers, most of which got their start in the past five years.

Despite their numbers, Vermont ciders are already producing impressive, award-winning ciders — fast earning the state a reputation as the "Napa Valley of Hard Cider." While you're here, be sure to take a bite.

Les cidres deviennent de plus en plus populaires au Vermont et font de plus en plus la renommée. Les industries en plein essor du vin, de la bière artisanale et des esprits de vieilles distilleries se portant à merveille dans l'état, mais aucune boisson locale n'a de racines aussi profondes que le cidre.

Entre le 16e siècle et le milieu du 20e siècle, pratiquement toutes les fermes du Vermont avaient un verger, dont les fruits servaient principalement à fabriquer du cidre et du brandy. Contrairement aux raisins, au houblon et aux autres fruits et céréales qui sont mal adaptés aux rigides hivers du Vermont, les pommes s'épanouissent dans le climat rude que de la Nouvelle-Angleterre.

Encore il y a une dizaine d'années, le Vermont ne comptait qu'un seul cidre commercial, le Woodstock Hard Cider, à Middlebury. Dans la région, on fait le distinguo entre hard cider, qui désigne le breuvage alcoolisé fermenté, et sweet cider, le version non filtrée et non alcoolisée. Aujourd'hui, en partie grâce au mouvement locavore et à la popularité croissante des régimes sans gluten, on dénombre 15 cidreries dans l'état, dont la plupart ont démarré dans les cinq dernières années.

Malgré leur nouveauté, les cidreries du Vermont produisent déjà des cidres impressionnants, qui méritent des prix et ont rapidement valu à l'état la réputation de « Napa Valley du cidre ». Rester au Vermont sans y goûter serait un péché!

WOODCHUCK HARD CIDER

1521 Exchange St., Middlebury, woodchuck.com

In 1991 when amateur winemaker Greg Felling began experimenting with cider recipes in his Redmondville garage, no one was making cider commercially. Today, Felling is the original cider maker at Woodchuck, the second largest cider manufacturer in the United States (behind Samuel Adams' Angry Orchard), producing about 6-8 million gallons annually. In 2010, the company purchased 45 percent of the state's total processed fruit. If Woodchuck bought every apple grown in Vermont, the juice would barely fill a third of its fermentation tanks.

Despite its industrial scale, Woodchuck has never lost sight of its roots. Its cider makers work closely with local orchards and nascent ciders to promote the state's growing cider industry.

In Middlebury, visitors can take a self-guided tour of Woodchuck's impressive 134 million cubic foot and bottling plant, read about its history, and then sample twenty-one custom non-charging ciders in its beautifully appointed tasting room and gift shop.

This time of year, Woodchuck's Fall Harvest and Winter Chill are favorites as is its Private Reserve Pumpkin. Other seasonal and limited varieties include Cherry Cherry, Chocolate Raspberry, Ginger and Smoked Apple.

Woodchuck is a family-friendly destination where both the seasoned cider connoisseur and those new to the beverage can discover why Vermont-made cider is creating a national buzz.

En 1991, quand le vénévole amateur Greg Felling a commencé à essayer des recettes de cidre dans son garage de Redmondville, personne n'en produisait à des fins commerciales. Aujourd'hui, Greg est le premier cidriculteur de Woodchuck, deuxième plus importante cidrerie aux États-Unis derrière l'Angry Orchard de Samuel Adams, avec une production d'environ 25,7 millions de litres par année. En 2010, l'entreprise a acheté 45 pour cent du volume total de fruits transformés de l'État. Si Woodchuck achète toutes les pommes cultivées au Vermont, leur jus remplirait à peine un tiers de ses cuves de fermentation.

Malgré sa production industrielle, Woodchuck n'a jamais perdu de vue ses racines. Ses cidriculteurs travaillent étroitement avec les vignerons locaux et les nouvelles cidreries afin de promouvoir l'industrie du cidre et pleine d'investissement dans l'État.

À Middlebury, il est possible de faire une visite guidée de la cidrerie et de l'une d'embarcadere de Woodchuck des installations impressionnantes de 34 millions de dollars, de se rafraîchir sur l'histoire de l'entreprise et d'essayer une vingtaine de cidres dans la magnifique salle de dégustation, qui en plus aussi se procurer à la boutique et dans la sélection d'offrir constamment.

À l'automne, les variétés Fall Harvest et Winter Chill de Woodchuck sont très populaires, tout comme le Private Reserve Pumpkin. Parmi les autres variétés saisonnières en quantités limitées, mentionnons les cidres Cherry Cherry, Chocolate Raspberry, Ginger et Smoked Apple.

Woodchuck est une destination familiale, où les connoisseurs tout comme les néophytes se feront un plaisir de découvrir pour quoi les cidres de Vermont créent un tel enthousiasme à l'échelle nationale.

CITIZEN CIDER

318 Pine St., Burlington, VT/citizencider.com

Citizen Cider is proud positive that, in Vermont and elsewhere, craft cider can now compete head-to-head with the nation's best craft beer. The cidery was launched in fall 2011 by three friends who persuaded the owners of Middlebury's Happy Valley Orchard to give them 5,000 gallons of apple juice to convert into hard cider. Those friends' hard work and determination paid off. In 2014 and 2015, Vermonters voted Citizen Cider the state's best hard cider; it's on track to produce 250,000 gallons this year.

Located in the heart of Burlington's South End Arts District, Citizen Cider reflects the neighborhood's young, hip and often-creative ethos. The tasting room has a full kitchen for appetizers and meals, with outdoor seating on a large, raised wooden deck. Occasionally there's live music.

But, cider remains the main attraction. "Flights," or sampling trays, allow patrons to try five of the 10 ciders on tap daily. Among the possibilities are United Press, Citizen Cider's off-dry light and crisp flagship variety; Milk Up, made with Belgian beer yeast; the Dirty Hopper, a slightly sweeter cider infused with ginger and lemon peel; and others, fermented with local blueberries. The first three are also sold in Citizen's signature silver aluminum cans.

While you're there, sample the menu of cider-aspect edibles, including the Citizen Burger dressed with cider cheese, cider mustard and cider caramelized onions; the cider-braised barbecue brisket sandwich and mussels fried with cider-steamed Hollandaise sauce. All are unique tastes of Burlington.

STOWE CIDER

1115 Parker St., Stowe, stowecider.com

One of the newer arrivals on Vermont's cider scene, Stowe Cider is worth a visit for anyone passing through Stowe. The cidery, which opened only two years ago, is located along Route 100 in a former grocery stand. It's already making a big name for itself in the cider world and is primed to produce 50,000 gallons in 2015 — up from just 10,000 gallons a year ago.

Stowe Cider currently produces 15 different ciders, most of which are European-style — dry or semi-dry with tart, crisp flavors — and made using locally grown apples and other ingredients such as strawberries, blueberries, malt, ginger and hot peppers.

While the cidery offers no tour, virtually every aspect of production is visible as one steps through the door. That includes the racks of former bourbon barrels — provided by Smugglers' Hatch Distillery, located just over the mountain pass in Jeffersonville — that are used to make a limited-release, barrel-aged cider. For $5, visitors can taste only four ciders available on tap and take home the glass.

Also on display is a large glass fermentation flask that head cider maker Mark Roy uses to concoct new recipes. One of the best aspects of visiting Stowe Cider is the opportunity to sample products created in the last day or two, some of them so experimental that they haven't even been named. Accordingly, every visit to the cidery is different. Beyond its three flagship ciders, visitors will always find something fresh to taste. Be sure to take home a bottle or growler as Stowe Cider is currently sold only in Vermont.

Prenons les petits déjeuners dans l'intimité du cidre du Vermont, Stowe Cider veut le décrire si vous passez par Stowe. Cette cidrerie — qui a ouvert ses portes il y a seulement deux ans — est située le long de la route 100 dans une ancienne épicerie. Elle commence à peine à se faire un nom dans le monde du cidre et est en voie de produire plus de 50 000 litres en 2015, soit trois fois plus que l'année dernière!

Stowe Cider produit actuellement 15 cidres différents dont la plupart sont de style européen — sec ou demi sec acide, vif — et les fabrique localement avec des pommes locales et d'autres ingrédients tels que fraises, bleuets, menthe, baies de goévière et piments forts.

La cidrerie n'offre pas de visite, mais pratiquement tous les aspects de sa production sont visibles dès qu'on passe la porte — notamment les rangs d'anciennes barriques de bourbon — procureurs de la distillerie Smugglers' Hatch situées juste de l'autre côté de la montagne — à Jeffersonville — qui servent à fabriquer un cidre vieill en barrique avant en quantités limitées. Pour $ 5, les visiteurs peuvent goûter l'un des quatre cidres en fût et rapporter le verre à la maison!

On peut également y voir une grande cave de fermentation que le maître-cidriculteur Mark Roy utilise pour concocter de nouvelles recettes. L'un des meilleurs aspects d'une visite à Stowe Cider, c'est la possibilité d'essayer les produits créés dans les deux derniers jours, dont certains sont si expérimentaux qu'ils n'ont même pas encore de nom. Par conséquent, chaque visite à la cidrerie est différente. Outre les trois cidres en bouteille, les visiteurs trouveront toujours quelque chose de nouveau à essayer. N'oubliez pas de rapporter une bouteille (ou deux) à la maison, car le cidre de Stowe Cider n'est vendu qu'au Vermont.

BOYDEN VALLEY WINERY & SPIRITS

64 Route 104, Cambridge, boydenvalley.com

Boyden Valley Winery & Spirits may be one of the most scenic places in Vermont to sample cider — or wine or apple liquor, all made right there on the 1,000-acre family farm. Located in the picturesque Lamoille River Valley not far from Smugglers' Notch, the farm has been in the Boyden family for five generations. Their attachment to the land shines through whenever you look.

A restored 1876 carriage barn now serves as the tasting room and store. For $10, guests can sample seven of Boyden's adult beverages, including its Vermont Ice Hard Cider, Double Bourbon Cider, the off-dry to semi-sweet Royale Cider, and the new Cran-Blog Cider made from locally grown cranberries. All are available in flip-top bottles or in "growlers."

Boyden's four hard ciders are sparkling, crisp, mostly dry or semi-dry, and made from McIntosh, Empire and Northern Spy apples grown in southern Vermont. Boyden also produces more than a dozen wines and two cream liquors: Vermont Ice Apple Cream and Vermont Ice Maple Cream. While you're there, order a French gourmet cheese plate and grab a table outside to bask in great views of the Green Mountains.

Tours of the tank and barrel room are available twice daily, but call ahead to confirm. During warmer months, try a guided trip to the winery down the scenic Lamoille River with Vermont Canoe & Kayak, which includes the winery tour and tasting. W

Boyden Valley Winery & Spirits est sans doute l'un des plus beaux endroits du Vermont pour déguster un verre de cidre, de vin ou de liqueur de pomme, toutes ces boissons étant fabriquées à la ferme familiale de 1 000 acres. Située dans la pittoresque vallée de la rivière Lamoille, non loin de Smugglers' Notch, la ferme appartient à la famille Boyden depuis cinq générations. Leur attachement à la terre est palpable.

Une grange rénovée datant de 1876 sert maintenant de salle de dégustation et de magasin. Pour 10 $, les visiteurs peuvent goûter sept boissons « pour adultes » dont le Vermont Ice Hard Cider, le Double Bourbon Cider, le Royale Cider ainsi que le nouveau Cran-Blog Cider fait à partir de cranberries locales. Toutes les boissons sont offertes en bouteilles à bec ou en fûts. Les visites des cuves et des barriques sont offertes deux fois par jour, mais téléphonez à l'avance pour réserver.

Les quatre cidres de Boyden sont pétillants et vifs, pour le pluspart secs ou demi-secs, et sont faits à base de pommes McIntosh, Empire et Northern Spy provenant du sud du Vermont. Boyden produit également une douzaine de vins et deux liqueurs à la crème: la Vermont Ice Apple Cream et la Vermont Ice Maple Cream. Pendant que vous y êtes, commandez aussi une plateaux de fromages français et prenez place à l'une des tables à l'extérieur pour profiter de la superbe vue sur les Montagnes vertes.

Des visites de la salle des cuves et des barriques sont offertes deux fois par jour, mais téléphonez à l'avance pour réserver. Durant les mois les plus chauds, faites une visite guidée du vignoble sur les rives de la magnifique rivière Lamoille avec Vermont Canoe & Kayak, qui comprend aussi une dégustation de vins. W

Transversal les cinéastes et les porteurs de vision ont fait d'Autunno 10e anniversaire un événement très important. Film Festival propose 13 jours de films indépendants de partout dans le monde. Notes petit écran offre le grand écran. Le festival de cinéma est sur le mouvement et les choix de la personne, le plus plaisir au sein même: offre un programme fascinant composé de films sonnets, de documentaires et de films d'animation. Cette année, les thèmes une fois des imaginations de l'identité, du lieu, soi et du passage à l'âge adulte seront abordés. Les cinéastes convergeront pour venir célébrer de grands cinéastes, regarder des œuvres tournées au Vermont et se reconnecter sur leur sujet devant les films à l'écran présentés tout le long. Finalement, nous avons eu de courir au festival maintenant les films: My Ancestral Trail sur la formation d'un groupe punk dans les années 1980 à Stockholm; Anna, qui le sentiment de vampirisme entre à El Grito Morel; Anna Night. Vous pouvez vous attendre à une nouvelle mission de Film tout aussi éprouvante cette année. W

art at the airport

Burlington City Arts curates art exhibits in three areas of the airport, the Skyway, the area above the escalator and the walls facing security for Gates 1-8. Whether you've arrived early for a flight or are waiting to pick up passengers, do take the time to look around!

In September and October, the Gates area features Ken Rausack's plein-air paintings of both urban and pastoral scenes. In the Skyway, self-taught painter Bruce Conklin presents rural views of Vermont influenced by the impressionist movement.

Starting in November, Cameron Schmitt's representational works, painted directly from local landscapes, are on view in the Gates. Phil Laughlin's oil paintings of the Champlain Valley and other New England locales hang in the Skyway.

For all three months, Lee Garrison's abstract paintings of flowers, grasses and waters can be seen above the escalator. If you're going up, be sure to turn around and look at the wall behind you. But watch your step!

All of these artists live in or have spent time in Vermont. Please enjoy examples of their work at the airport and on their individual websites.

Burlington City Arts organise des expositions d'œuvres d'art, à l'extérieur dans l'aéroport, dans le Skyway au-dessus de l'escalier mécanique et sur les murs qui sont face à la sécurité pour les portes 1-8. Que vous soyez arrivé à l'aéroport pour votre vol ou que vous attendiez des passagers, prenez le temps de regarder autour de vous!

En septembre et en octobre, dans le secteur des portes, vous pourrez admirer les toiles de Ken Rausack peintes en plein air, qui représentent des paysages (landscapes) tantôt champêtres. Dans le Skyway, place aux tableaux d'inspiration impressionniste du peintre autodidacte Bruce Conklin, qui évoquent des scènes rurales du Vermont.

Des novembre, les œuvres figuratives sont peintes en plein air de Cameron Schmitt, qui mettent à l'honneur les paysages locaux, seront exposées dans le secteur des portes. Les toiles de Phil Laughlin, montrant la vallée du Champlain et d'autres lieux typiques de la Nouvelle-Angleterre, seront quant à elles suspendues dans le Skyway.

Durant ces trois mois, au-dessus de l'escalier mécanique, vous pourrez contempler les peintures abstraites de Lee Garrison, représentant des fleurs, des paysages et des plans d'eau. Si vous montez, ne manquez pas de vous retourner pour regarder le mur derrière vous. Mais faites attention à la marche!

Tous ces artistes, éventuellement ont passé du temps au Vermont. Vous pourrez voir certains de leurs œuvres à l'aéroport et d'autres sur leurs sites Web.

How the ground crew at Montreal's Billy Bishop Airport keeps the planes flying

BY STEPHAN DE BRUIJN

Unless you're seated on the starboard side of a plane as it descends onto BTV's runway, you probably won't notice Heritage Aviation, just southeast of the airport terminal. It's not small — its two hangars total about 44,000 square feet — but the buildings are blocky and nondescript. You'd never guess that its services keep the airport moving.

In addition to offering a full-service retail terminal for about 25 small planes, daily (complete with lounge, a full kitchen and a Ping-Pong table), Heritage is a fixed-based operator servicing all of the airport's commercial flights. That means fueling about 26 planes a day, which adds up to about half a million gallons of fuel every month. Heritage employees de-ice each of those planes, too, in the colder months. All told, company technicians contribute more than 1,500 hours of maintenance at BTV every month.

Carol Betz, Heritage's director of finance, joined the company in 2011. She met up with BTV on the main building's "green roof" to explain just how vital Heritage is to the airport's operations.

Heritage flies under the radar of most commercial travelers. What kinds of services do you offer that they don't know about?

I don't think most passengers realize that we have a customs office here. For certain flights from Canada or Europe — the ones that originate or come here specifically for ski season or the fall foliage — those travelers need to clear customs. All of that is arranged by us and BTV. We also arrange for transportation off-site. We can coordinate with somebody who comes in on a charter plane that has a mechanical problem. We might coordinate with BTV about how to get them on the next commercial flight, if necessary.

We also pump a lot of gallons of airplane fuel. The airlines own their own fuel, but we bring it in and take account of the inventory, and we order for the airlines every day.

A means that your range sort of cuts both directions. It's a lot to plan for, that you're not necessarily past Heritage Aviation, just on the east end of the airport, pointing the descender, the gate of descent, of BTV. The two hangars are sort of pointing past, past — 46,000 square feet, but it's sort of messy and sort of intricate. I mean, you can't really imagine, that the services that you're finding, sort of intricate, sort of intricate, sort of intricate.

In plus, d'offrir un maintenance offrant tous les services pour 25 petits avions par jour (incluant aires de repos, cuisine complète et table de ping-pong), Heritage est un exploitant établi sur place dont les services sont avertis pour tous les vols commerciaux de l'aéroport dont il s'agit, en carburant de quelque 26 avions par jour, soit près de 2,5 millions de litres par mois, et le dégivrage de ces appareils pendant l'hiver. L'un dans l'autre, les techniciens de l'entreprise font plus de 1,500 heures de maintenance à BTV tous les mois.

CAROL BETZ

Director of Finance,
Heritage Aviation

Director of Finance
Heritage Aviation

Carol Betz, directrice des finances de Heritage, travaille pour l'aéroport depuis 2011. Elle a rejoint l'intérieur de BTV sur le « toit vert » du bâtiment principal pour lui expliquer à quel point Heritage joue un rôle crucial pour les activités de l'aéroport.

Heritage est méconnue de la plupart des voyageurs. Quels services offrez-vous qu'ils ne connaissent pas?

Je ne crois pas que les passagers soient conscients que nous avons un bureau des douanes ici. Pour certains vols en provenance du Canada ou de l'Europe — ces vols alternent ici pour la saison de ski ou le période des feuilles d'automne — les voyageurs doivent passer les douanes. Nous nous occupons avec BTV de tout cet aspect. Nous organisons aussi le transport hors site. Nous pouvons coordonner le vol

You hear the roar, and you cannot hear anything else, and the windows rattle. It's like the sound of freedom, you know?

On entend le vomissement des moteurs, qui entierre tous les autres bruits, et les fenêtres se mettent à vibrer. C'est un bruit qui évoque la liberté, je trouve.

What are Hestage's other main operations?

We have contracts with the major airlines, primarily for fueling and cleaning. For maintenance, we do smaller repairs for them as they need us. We perform services such as detailing, changing locations out of the aircraft, and catering services for the smaller jets that come in and out. We also sell parts for aircraft. We closed our charter company in 2010 because the charter business was just really not working for us. We found that if we paid back, it would be financially more viable for us to be here as fueling, cleaning and maintenance services.

Do you have a background in aviation?

My history is not in aviation at all. My history is in business management, accounting, that kind of thing. I didn't know anything about aviation other than that I used to fly. When I came here, they were implementing a new software program, and I've done that many times before. The company had also acquired Atlantic Aviation, the only other competitor on the airport, about a week or two after I started. So the business grew exponentially almost overnight.

Do you see many unusual or luxurious aircraft here?

Some of the most exciting aircraft making plans that have come through here have been those that are flying for air shows. On occasion, we have a group come in with six of their aircraft that they use for doing shows. They're very, very cool planes. I also love hearing the [F-16s]. Air National Guard planes go out every day. You hear the roar and you cannot hear anything else, and the windows rattle. It's like the sound of freedom, you know?

If owners of private planes can get their aircraft serviced at any airport, why would they choose Hestage?

On the day of my interview here, when I came through the door no one at the desk knew if I was flying commercial on my own plane, coming to complain about something, here for an interview or what. But somebody stood up and greeted me and asked me what they could do to help me. I have seen people here take time after work to help a customer. They don't have to but they do. It's just a really nice group of people. ☐ dination. Il n'est pas difficile de qui arrive dans un milieu aéroportuaire, un problème récurrent. En coordination avec BTV, nous faisons le nécessaire pour qu'elle passe le prochain vol commercial, par exemple.

Nous pompent aussi de grandes quantités de carburant. Les transporteurs aériens ont leur propre carburant, mais nous l'apportons ici. Nous l'investissons et passons les commandes quotidiennement.

Quelles sont les autres activités principales de Hestage?

Nous avons des contrats avec les principales compagnies aériennes, surtout pour l'avitaillement en carburant et le nettoyage. En ce qui concerne la maintenance, nous effectuons de petites réparations au besoin. Nous offrons des services tels que nettoyage du fuselage, vitrage des observatoires, des usages et services de travail pour les plus petits appareils. Nous vendons aussi des pièces d'avion. Nous avons fermé notre société de vols privés en 2010 parce que ce secteur d'activité ne nous convenait pas. Nous avons déterminé qu'il serait plus viable financièrement de nous limiter à des services d'avitaillement, de nettoyage et de maintenance.

Aviez-vous des antécédents dans l'aviation?

Absolument pas! J'ai travaillé en administration des affaires, en comptabilité, bref dans ce genre de domaine. Je ne connaissais rien à l'aviation mais j'adore prendre l'avion. Quand j'ai eu l'avion, l'entreprise était en train de mettre en œuvre un nouveau logiciel et j'avais beaucoup d'expérience pour faire tout de même leurs opérations. Elle a aussi fait l'acquisition d'Atlantic Aviation, son seul concurrent à l'aéroport, une semaine ou deux après que j'ai commencé en fonction. Les affaires ont donc connu une croissance exponentielle en un rien de temps.

Voyez-vous beaucoup d'avions militaires ou très luxueux ici?

Certains des avions les plus impressionnants ou intéressants sont ceux qui participent à des spectacles aériens. Il arrive qu'un groupe vienne ici avec six appareils utilisés pour faire des figures de voltige. Ce sont des avions vraiment beaux. J'ai bien aussi entendu les appareils de la Garde nationale aérienne (du V-16) qui décolent chaque jour. On entend le vrillonnement des moteurs qui entierre tous les autres bruits et les fenêtres se mettent à vibrer. C'est un bruit qui évoque la liberté, je trouve.

Si les propriétaires d'avions privés peuvent obtenir des services dans tous les aéroports, pourquoi choisir Hestage?

Le jour de mon interview ici, lorsque j'ai pu entrer, personne à la réception ne savait si j'avais mon propre avion, si je venais porter plainte, si je me présentais pour une interview ou si j'étais là pour une autre raison. Quelqu'un est venu, m'a accueilli et m'a demandé ce qu'il pouvait faire pour moi. J'ai vu des personnes ici rester après le travail pour rendre service à un client. Elles n'y sont pas obligées, mais elles le font, c'est tout. C'est vraiment une très belle équipe. ☐
